

Kris Kitchen

Pre-Cognitive Thinking and Pre-Cognitive Realisation sample 5

Kris Kitchen <kriskitchenz@gmail.com>

Mon, Jul 28, 2014 at 2:50 PM

lol

well i'm sure its true that they get a lot of random emails who knows man

getting in through the slush pile is hard take it from a writer

just remember this: James Joyce, possibly the greatest writer of all time, and almost certainly the greatest writer of the 20th century, brought Ulysses, possibly the greatest BOOK of all time, and certainly the greatest book of the 20th century, to something like 17 publishers, all of whom turned him down until a small publishing house in France took it on its one of those things were yeah, most writers dont get published - even the great ones so not getting published by itself does not mean you are not great, is the message. however, many idiots misconstrue the parable to mean that not getting published actually MAKES you great....

which is why i generally shy away from it, except with those who i know to be great in or or another way

Drew • 11:21 AM

Yeah, I am sure he will get this message.

11:52 AM

you having a good day?

1:06 PM

hanging in there my friend, working on a piece i'm composing for my g/f on piano yourself?

Drew • 1:07 PM

thats cool.

its ok.

your day is about to be augmented. I suspect your about to get a linkedin invite and or an email.

1:08 PM

oh realllly?

my linkedin profile needs a lot of work, maybe i should spend some time on that

Drew • 1:09 PM

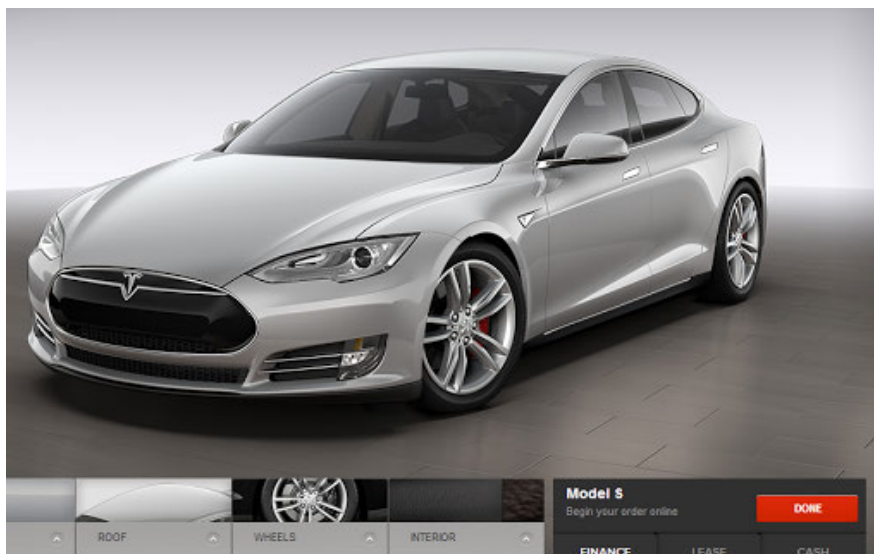

you will.

1:10 PM

already am

Drew • 1:10 PM

1:17 PM

but not indeterminable you're not the first person to try and put a price on art or to commodotize it in some way

Drew • 1:33 PM

I am the 1st person to put a price on something that literally does not exist.
my signature is the key.

1:34 PM

what is it that doesn't exist?

Drew • 1:34 PM

the piece of art on printed media.
the thing I can "sign"

1:35 PM

that definitely exists those are all over art museums and galleries

Drew • 1:35 PM

what is?

1:36 PM

pieces of art on printed media, signed by the creator working in mixed mediums

Drew • 1:36 PM

but I have never signed or created any of my mosaics.
I printed 2. I never signed them that doesn't make them any less "yours" it just makes them less valued by traditional art standards because of the lack of provenance it creates so if I sign them they become worth more as long as the history of signatures is maintained in a ledger.

1:37 PM

Drew • 1:37 PM

as long as I don't sign everything.

1:39 PM

as long as the veracity of the signature is verifiable

Drew • 1:39 PM

humm

1:39 PM

or rather the veracity of the piece the signature is one part of that, and with printed digital media, a big one

Drew • 1:39 PM

2 part authentication literally that has not happened.

what a quantum mind.

mindfuck

1:41 PM

haha

Drew • 1:41 PM

" he took the time to sign it"

1:43 PM

that applies more to something that's mass-produced e.g., a signed first-edition is worth more than a first-edition lacking a sig.

Drew • 1:43 PM

exactly, someone could make millions of prints of my mosaics, I may never know.

But it is currently in an impossible state that I have signed one.

1:44 PM

well, the way most digital photographers control that is by not distributing the full resolution or with digital watermarking

Drew • 1:45 PM

yep, but I did not do any of that.

because I wanted to literally sign them.

1:45 PM

well then that will be _the_ thing that sets it apart

Drew • 1:46 PM

they can live in the machine but will never be signed unless X happens maybe I am thinking too much about nothing.

1:48 PM

i'm not a good person to come to with that question at the moment....third day in a row with less than 3 hours sleep starting to get to me

Drew • 59 mins

whoa, man

59 mins

yeah and not because ive been partying or anything

Drew • 58 mins

that sucks bad

58 mins

just my sleep schedule has been strung up and down like a yo-yo as my various docs adjust the various drugs that allow me to actually function in one way or another

yeah it gets frustrating

Drew • 57 mins

yeah I bet.

they entity on the planet that can make something impossible is man.

55 mins

i have no idea what that means

Drew • 54 mins

it means anything is possible until someone makes it impossible.

54 mins

i think nature has that power

Drew • 54 mins

and I am currently in an impossible state as I have not signed any "art"

54 mins

one cannot defy the laws of physics (if one could truly know them)

Drew • 53 mins

I think the can.

correction

I know they can.

53 mins

then what they thought was a law isn't a law

if it can be broken, it's not a law

Drew • 52 mins

yep

like a yes/no question. there are 2 options, but actually there are 3 the 3rd is to not answer the question.

50 mins

i need to take a break from my desk...i'm going to take glass and my phone out to my porch and chainsmoke for a bit

Drew • 50 mins

k

50 mins

not answering the question is not itself an answer to the question, just a reaction to it

it's outside the question

it's a meta-response

Drew • 49 mins

yes = 1, No = 0

not answering =

47 mins

and refusing to answer the question lies outside the set of possible answers; it doesn't actually qualify as an answer

Drew • 47 mins

it trigger the wonder of why it was not answered was it a mistake? was the question dangerous? was the question embarassing?

was the question too critical?

45 mins

those are questions about the question itself

Drew • 45 mins

was there logic to not answering the question...

44 mins

rather than possible actual answers to the questions proposing that there is a third way to answer the question in not answering the question is not logically valid because it denies the set of all answers to the question being 1 or 0 or yes or no

Drew • 44 mins

humm

this is a wierd scenario that I think people have thought about a lot or not much.

41 mins

I would say a lot. Georg Cantor would have to say about it would have alot to save god damn this voice recognition cannot get anything right when there's all this construction outside

Drew • 40 mins

let me see who this is

40 mins

he's the father of set theory who also by the way happened to go insane

Drew • 39 mins

that can happen thinking about things like this

38 mins

yes it certainly can. I also think that mines the gravity towards these kinds of thoughts are already teetering on the brink so to speak or at least the kind of mine it takes to think these kinds of thoughts really has to be able to see outside of the box and once you see things outside of the box and just how far things outside of it go is there's really no stopping

Drew • 37 mins

that is correct

37 mins

I recommend the book everything and more a brief history of infinity by David Foster Wallace

I think you'd find it absolutely fascinating wait the title is everything and more in a brief history not a brief history a compact history of infinity aside from being a phenomenal fiction writer he was also a phenomenal logician dude holy shit you seriously recommended me to Eric Klein on LinkedIn?

Drew • 33 mins

I told you your day was about to get better.

32 mins

indeed! I can't even believe that he would bother to look at my profile

Drew • 31 mins

I can

31 mins

you flatter me kind sir

Drew • 30 mins

30 mins

ok, something must be made of this day, i feel newly energized though the feeling won't last long without caffeine, i fear so i must now shower and go out in search of it back soon.....

Drew • 29 mins

k. take it easy.

28 mins

first i'm going to write a message to eric klein telling him how incredible i think the lifeboat foundation is

Drew • 28 mins

So the unknown question gets answered it appears.
the question was not defined until it was realized.

27 mins

Pre-Cognitive Thinking and Pre-Cognitive Realisation

23 mins

whattttt the fuck
did you just read my mind?
i was just double-checking the spelling of a word i'm using

Drew • 23 mins

i do not know.

23 mins

presience

Drew • 23 mins

yes

22 mins

whoa
i'm going to think on that while i shower

Drew • 22 mins

—

Kris Kitchen

~Wizard of Odd